Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 01 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mostly dry. Sunny for some, grey and cold for others.

Today:
Areas of low cloud and fog reluctant to clear some eastern and central areas in particular, and where this happens it will feel cold. Many southern, western and northern areas should feel pleasant under sunny skies this afternoon.

Tonight:
Low cloud will spread back across many southern areas, with a mix of low cloud and fog across the east and northeast. Some western and northern areas clear and frosty.

Tuesday:
Low cloud and fog probably retreating to some eastern and northeastern areas, where it will feel cold. In contrast, many southern and western areas sunny and pleasantly mild by afternoon.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Cloudy with showery rain for southern areas Wednesday, this clearing Thursday. Much colder, clearer weather already across the north, then follows southwest late Thursday. Frosts becoming widespread.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.